"YOU'LL BE THE DEATH OF ME!"

6 APRIL 2019

It is Saturday 6 April 1944 and Wing Commander Hugh Thomas DFC must return to his base after snatching a brief 72 hour leave, during which he married his childhood sweetheart, Angela Cooper, who is travelling with him as far as Bridgnorth on the 7.30pm express from Kidderminster before she bids her husband of two days farewell as he travels on alone to his Wing Headquarters. Patricia Kingsley, Angela's bridesmaid, is travelling with them to be company for her on the return journey. Unfortunately, a 'would-be' lothario, Harry Brocklehurst, is also travelling on the train and is making a nuisance of himself by constantly pestering Patricia and Angela, much to the annoyance of Hugh. Lady Elizabeth Fairbourne, a somewhat forthright and outspoken aristocrat takes it upon herself to put Mr Brocklehurst firmly in his place! But none of this could prepare one for the shock of a totally unexpected and brutal murder!

It is fortunate then that a Detective Inspector Alfred Crowther should be boarding the train at Brignorth after a long and tedious day at Brignorth Police Station, on his way home to Arley. Unfortunately for him is the fact that a policeman is never truly off duty and, confronted with a murder, he has no alternative to taking charge and commencing an investigation. You may rest assured that the Inspector will leave no stone unturned as he questions the suspects which will eventually lead him to the apprehension of the perpetrator of this heinous crime.
