It is Saturday 22 June 1935. Summer has finally arrived after a long hard winter and, although the newspapers are full of stories about war with Germany once again looming on the horizon, no-one really believes it will come to that. And anyway, it is the time for love and romance! Thus, as Ivor Dunnit and his girlfriend, Win King, board the 7.30pm express from Kidderminster to Bridgnorth, they are happy and relaxed, enjoying each others' company and looking forward to their secret, romantic, escape to the countryside. Even the appearance of Nora Bone (a work colleague of Win's who for unknown reasons has taken it upon herself to make Win's life miserable, cannot spoil their trip. However, the appearance of two villains, Rob Berry and Ed Butt, is a little more disturbing and,

It is fortunate then that a Detective Inspector Alfred Crowther should be boarding the train at Bridgnorth after a long and tedious day at Bridgnorth Police Station, on his way home to Arley.
